Although photoshop is primarily a raster image editor, it also has advanced vector tools that allow you to create and manipulate shapes, such as lines, curves, and 3D objects. ## Working with the Interface Photoshop can be daunting to new users. The interface contains a lot of small buttons and functions, which initially can feel too numerous to figure out. In order to make Photoshop easier to understand, we will go through the interface and explain each button and option. The interface, the layers, the panels, and the workspace form the basis for most of what you will be doing in Photoshop. Because this book's focus is on training you in the features of Photoshop, we only briefly go into the basics of working in Photoshop. You will have many opportunities to go through the interface to work with the tools and menus. You will see that although Photoshop is intimidating at first, as you begin to use the program, you will find it logical and intuitive. When you're comfortable with Photoshop, it will make sense to you — the interface will come naturally.

In this Photoshop Elements tutorial we'll show you how to create a background with a simple illustration in a black-and-white 3D style. The image we use is a free vector illustration by Russell Campbell that you can find in the attached zip file, Image Library Fonts.zip. In the attached video tutorial you can see how you can create a black-and-white 3D-style background using this image in Photoshop Elements. STEP 1. Create a New Document The first step is to create a new Photoshop file and then set the size to 300 pixels for a 4-by-6 inch image. With the image opened, press Ctrl-N to create a new Photoshop document. The new document is named Image 1.psd. We're going to use the Ellipse Tool (L) with the shape type Circle and 200 pixels for the diameter. We'll change the color to black. Create a second shape using the rectangle tool (M) with the shape type Rectangle and 580 pixels for the height. We'll change the color to white. Adjust the layer to Fit to Layers to get the two shapes to fit in the same image. STEP 2. Create the Simple Illustration Select both shapes (Shift-click to select the shapes) and create the simple illustration. It should look like this: Move and resize the shapes as you wish. Duplicate the layer (Ctrl-F6 or select Layer > Duplicate Layer) so you can make changes to one shape and have the other shape as a reference. We'll add a 3-D effect to make the illustration more interesting. STEP 3. Add the 3D Look Create a new layer above the top shape. The layer name is 3D. On the 3D layer create a new layer and name it Gradient. The Gradient settings are: Color: #e8a9f0 Opacity: 50% Blending Mode: Multiply Use the Direct Selection Tool (A) to select the outside of the top shape. Press S to select all the colors of this shape. If you press Ctrl-I you will see that a color swatch is created for each color. We need to get all the colors out of this layer so press Ctrl-I again and select All the colors to get them all out of the layer. 388ed7b0c7

CALGARY — A search warrant has been executed at the Calgary-based farm where two horses died from laminitis after competing in the last weekend's International Horse Trials. The search warrant was executed at the residence of Rollie Milburn, the president of the farrier association. It was executed Sunday afternoon following an update from the RCMP to the association, which initially withheld information. "We have been kept in the dark about many things," association President Rollie Milburn said. The owner of the farm, Sophie Whittington, has not been charged with any crimes and is not considered a suspect, RCMP Cpl. Gordon Chua said. "We're still investigating the circumstances around the horses and the course of events that led to the horse's death," he said. "At this time there are no charges pending and no one has been arrested." Chua said it's still unclear where the horses were from and where they came from. "Our thoughts are with the horses' families," he said. In a news release, Whittington said, "I am devastated by this sudden loss. "I feel truly sorry for the Whittington horses and their families. I will continue to help the RCMP investigation in any way that I can." The other horse was treated for laminitis during the horse trials on Saturday night. The third horse suffered from heat exhaustion on Saturday. Families from both countries are making arrangements to travel here. The RCMP said in a news release Sunday evening they seized a heat gun that may have been used to try to protect the horses from the sun during the trials. RCMP said the association provided them information at the request of Whittington. "I would like to apologize to anyone who may have been affected by this event," Whittington said in the release. "We made mistakes and we want to assure the public that we regret any mistake we made in caring for the horses during the trials." The search warrant was executed after the RCMP received a tip about the animals, Chua said. It's unclear if the tip came from a member of the public or from the association. The farm has agreed to be checked for pest infestations, Chua said.

"The range of businesses and products are very exciting, but working across the world and the different time zones presents some challenges," Garry Allen, CEO of data centre supplier McData, told Computerworld. "It's natural when you see a new market like this there is some adjustment to how you run things," Allen added. McData confirmed it is looking at the British market with care, but it seems likely some US staff will be allocated to the job, while some UK staff will be redeployed in the US and Canada. The UK office will work as McData's European headquarters, but its new European data centre, which opened late last year in a former defence contractor building in Zetland, near Newhaven, is operated by the firm. Wholesale and retail customers will have contracts for services provided by the company, which ranges from network connectivity, to high performance computing and cloud services, rather than be housed at McData's Colchester or Maidenhead data centres. A separate buyer of storage and data services will be the Carphone Warehouse, which recently launched a cloud computing initiative. The retailer is known for closing its massive datacentres at Princes Street in Edinburgh and at Cadbury's Park Street headquarters in London, where it had 21,500 square feet of data centre space. A spokeswoman said the firm was considering McData's proposal. She added: "While we are still assessing McData's offer, we are impressed by the merits of their proposal and would be looking forward to working with them on the transformation." McData said it was extending the talks with Carphone Warehouse. "We are in a constructive and collaborative dialogue with Carphone Warehouse and are certain that the arrangement will be a success for all parties," said a spokesman. The move comes amid major changes at the retailer following the departure of Sir Terry Leahy from its chief executive role. Leahy quit on 20 January, but held on to his job as chairman until 28 January to give clarity to the timing of his departure. He did not need the security, just wanted to offer himself to the shareholders. It is time to invest in the business." McData also announced on Friday that founder and former chief executive Stephen Rogers is stepping down to become "lead director" and deputy chairman. Andy Hall, Rogers
