Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for manufacturing a semiconductor device, and more specifically to a method for manufacturing a semiconductor device in which a high-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer is used as a gate electrode. 2. Description of the Background Art In a complementary metal oxide semiconductor (CMOS) device, a high-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer is used as a gate electrode. However, it is difficult to form a gate electrode by using a conventional reactive ion etching method, which is used in a transistor having a conventional metal gate electrode, due to a large gate-source voltage Vgs. Therefore, it is necessary to use a high-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer, such as a nitride semiconductor layer having a wide band gap, as the gate electrode. However, the nitride semiconductor layer has such a feature that nitrogen is easily released from the nitride semiconductor layer as compared with the silicon germanium semiconductor layer, and therefore the threshold voltage of the transistor increases with time due to the effect of nitrogen released from the nitride semiconductor layer. Hereinafter, the conventional complementary MOS device and the conventional method for manufacturing the same will be described. FIGS. 16 to 18 are cross-sectional views showing the conventional method for manufacturing a semiconductor device. FIG. 16 is a cross-sectional view showing a semiconductor device in a state in which a low-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer is used as a gate electrode. FIG. 17 is a cross-sectional view showing a semiconductor device in a state in which a high-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer is used as a gate electrode. FIG. 18 is a cross-sectional view showing a semiconductor device in a state in which the low-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer is used as a gate electrode and a conventional method for manufacturing the semiconductor device. In the conventional method for manufacturing the semiconductor device, a low-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer 5 is first formed on a substrate 1, as shown in FIG. 16. The low-breakdown voltage semiconductor layer 5 is formed by ion doping of, for example,
