The team that brought you Portal and Left 4 Dead among other titles have once again hit the nail on the head with this one. Republik, a great browser based FPS game, has also been hitting beta, and you can play it for free, right now, actually. It's not a Half-Life 2 game but a spinoff of sorts, made on the HL2 engine. A leaked video showed the game with a release date of February 14, which is actually today, and as of now, only the one and two player modes are available but there's currently an open call for more modes. There's a single player mode called "Republik City" and the two-player modes are called "Siege" and "Siege Classic." Siege is a standard team deathmatch and the other is a horde mode. There's a ladder mode that is similar to 6d1f23a050
